

Flutist/singer/songwriter Suki Rae has been performing internationally in festivals and concerts for over thirty years. Beginning piano at age five- she studied flute with Walfried Kujala and Ralph Johnson of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra as well as at Interlochen Arts Academy and Northwestern University Music Institute. She has won many awards including: ASCAP; semi-finalist in Song of the Year Contest ; and a grant from the Lower Manhattan Cultural Council. She has been musician in residence in eight locations including Cornell University; Israel; and Spain; and has appeared on Radio (including WNYC's "New Sounds") and Television. She has written, acted, and directed for theater and film including her autobiographical "muse-ical" "I Don't Wannabe A Wannabe" at the Writer's Voice. Her song "Bugz in Da Bed" animated by Frank Cromer was featured on "Women of Substance" Radio. She is featured in a documentary with the rock band OASIS "Dig your Soul on the Streets." She has released seven self-produced recordings – six of original music on Reverence for Life Records.

This is her first poetry book.

"I adore Suki's work – light-hearted, very soulful. Her beautiful heart and spirit merge magically with the reader. Unlike any other poetry book – a huge thumbs up from me."

- Alta H. Mabin, author, editor, and publisher Poets Unlimited Magazine

"Suki absolutely knocks it out of the park – you'll love every single song on her album, "Can't Stop Now" - an innovative and fresh path work of creative musical art from a mature, eclectic, and confident artist."

- Jacob Aiden, TunedLoud Magazine

"Suki Rae - one of those rare individuals who can write great music and lyrics that capture the pathos and humor of our lives- her songs stay in your head and force you to whistle them when you're walking down the street-one of a kind."

- Diana Amsterdam, The Writer's Voice, Playwright, Screenwriter

" a flutist of intelligence and sensitivity."

- Bill Tillard, Sound Choice Magazine
